0.2 INTRODUCTION TO THE APPENDIX

The collection of seminal documents contained within the Appendix is not only designed to complement the thesis, it is intended to act as a unique resource for those seeking statistics and other information concerning the RCM, otherwise available only in the numerous minute books and documents in the RCM Archive and elsewhere. During the second half of the nineteenth century, the 1851 Commission was arguably the most influential body in England outside Parliament and the Privy Council as illustrated by its members (1.0). The Prince of Wales used the Commission as a vehicle to initiate the movement to establish the RCM from 1878. It was an attempt to garner government subvention on the one hand while setting the RCM at the heart of the Establishment on the other; consequently, a high proportion of the Commissioners went on to serve the RCM as Vice-Presidents (3.3), members of Council (3.4), and the Executive and Finance Committees (3.5).

Until now, scholars of this period have assumed that the establishment of a national music school on the Kensington Estate was an initiative instigated by the Prince Consort and implemented by Sir Henry Cole as Chairman of the Society of Arts; however, new evidence paints a different picture. The distribution of the proceeds of the Great Exhibition contained within the Prince Consort's Memorandum included in Theodore Martin's 1876 biography (1.1), demystifies, once and for all, his intentions for the Kensington Estate. Its inclusion is warranted not least because it establishes the principle that the idea to found a national school of music on the South Kensington Estate from its name to its mission was, in fact, the brainchild of the Prince of Wales (later Edward VII).

The reproduction of the 1878 charter of amalgamation between the RAM and the NTSM (3.0) and the 1880 draft RCM charter (3.1), both of which were included in my MA thesis, was a conscious decision. The discovery Lord Henry Thring's personal papers and manuscript draft charters in the RCM Library, his papers, correspondence and references in the Board of Management Minutes of the Royal Commission for the Exhibition of 1851, have shed new light on the circumstances surrounding the foundation of the RCM in 1883, which justified the charters' inclusion. The Constitution imposed by the 1851 Commission (2.1) on the NTSM provides a context for each subsequent charter and particularly the final, considerably more extensive charter set out by Grove in 1883 (3.2) with which it shares many initiatives.

The list of external examiners (3.7) for each set of annual examinations and those for the ARCM (3.26) is useful: in the first instance it sheds light on Grove's policy to ensure that the progress of RCM students, scholars and professors were moderated by some of the most celebrated and respected Continental and English performers and teachers of the day; secondly, it gives a clear indication of a consistent approach to these assessments, where a proportion of the same names appear year after year. In compiling an accurate record of professors and teachers at the RCM (3.6), it has been impossible to provide precise dates of arrival and departure for all staff as the first volumes of both the Minutes of the Board of Professors and several volumes of the Professors' Wages and Salaries—the only conclusive record of a professor's period of work at the RCM—are missing and the annual reports only give a rough idea of dates where dates are included. When compared with the NTSM list of Professors (2.0), the extent of cross-pollination between the two institutions becomes apparent.

The Chronological Index of Scholars (3.8) lists the place of birth in each case, whereas the Chronological Index of Students (3.12) only includes the place of last residence, usually the family home, as no other information was available. Both Indices give an overview of the numbers of students to enter the RCM in any year and the numbering system corresponds directly to the Pupils' Registers held in the RCM Archive. The Scholar Register and the Student Register (3.9 and 3.13) both include information on first and second study instruments and the name of the professor in each case where it is listed. The dates of birth, and of entering and leaving the RCM have been included in each case, as have the final class grading results, which are explained in Chapter Four (p. 168), alongside awards and medals and a list of ARCM Laureates (3.25). References to the Executive and Finance Committee minutes are included where a student is either dismissed or has left prematurely; however, in most cases, these provide little or no detailed information regarding the reasons for a student's departure. The inclusion of records for all students and scholars for the period between 1883 and 1895, and particularly those of more notable students such as Percy Buck, Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, Walford Davies, Thomas Dunhill, Fritz Hart, Gustav Holst, William Yeates Hurlstone, John Ireland, Frederick Shinn, Arthur Somervell, Vaughan Williams, Samuel Coleridge Taylor and Landon Ronald, will provide a useful resource, while removing the requisite to consult the Registers held in the RCM Archive. To have provided a list of instruments played by students and scholars, organised for each year, would not have been completely accurate as the many of the students changed their first and second study instruments several times during their time at the RCM and the standard they attained is not always clear in each case; however, a list of first and second study instruments has been provided for the first year (3.17). This gives a clear indication of the initial difficulties faced by Stanford and Holmes in their attempts to perform contemporary repertoire with the College orchestra. Two tables containing the father's profession, where mentioned, have been included and they help, albeit in a limited sense, to give a clearer idea of the student demographic (3.11 and 3.15). Certain professions, such as 'Barrister-at-law' and 'shipbuilder' speak for themselves; however, professions such as 'Merchant' or 'Clergyman' give a clear indication neither to wealth nor status. The inclusion of lists of student statistics by sex and nationality (3.16; 3.10 and 3.14) allow for a comparison to be made between the demographic at the European conservatoires, particularly Leipzig (6.0).

The lists of the Opera Performances and Reviews (3.18), give an indication of Grove's success in overturning public opinion of an art-form traditionally vilified. A record of Stanford's eighteen successful attempts to mount an opera performance in English alongside details of the press reviews provide an unbiased critique of most of the performances and, as such, set each performance within the wider context of London's musical environment. A comparison between the lists of the RCM opera orchestras (3.19) and those for the Philharmonic Society and Crystal Palace Orchestras have allowed for a detailed record of the development of the College orchestra from 1885 onwards. RCM professors and other professional musicians who were engaged to play for performance are labelled, as are those students and scholars who were invited back to swell the ranks of the orchestra both for operas and at the RCM's fortnightly concerts (3.22). The Chronological Overview of the RCM fortnightly concerts (3.20) 1884-1895 includes information on orchestral, chamber, choral and second-study concerts at a glance. The more comprehensive Chronological Index of RCM Concerts and Repertoire 1884-1895 (3.21) includes all music played and sung at the fortnightly concerts held in the Concert Hall at Alexandra House, St James's Hall and the Princes' Hall. It illustrates the somewhat limited repertoire to which a just over 50% of them students were exposed. Almost exclusively from the Austro-German canon over the fifty years prior to the RCM's foundation, this repertoire was programmed alongside contemporary European and British works and a formidable number of premier performances by RCM student composers (3.24). Underpinned by a Darwinian philosophy that informed a policy where the majority of the students were bereft of opportunities to perform in public, these performances nonetheless confirmed the RCM's reputation. In producing 222 concerts and operas in eleven years when set against the NTSM's ten concerts (2.2) in six years serves to demonstrate not so much that the NTSM students were inferior to those at the RCM; rather, Grove's policy was designed to satisfy the College's remit, outlined in the 1883 charter, to raise the standard of musical taste in England. The alphabetical list of RCM concert repertoire (3.23) lists works by composer and forces for which they were written. For the most part, opus numbers and catalogue references have been provided; however, in a handful of cases, the paucity of primary source information has made this impossible. For example, the first movement of the Mozart Piano Concerto in C minor, played as part of the second study concert (92) in 1889 was not listed with the name of the movement; consequently, it has been impossible to determine absolutely which concerto movement was played. Likewise the Barcarolle and Gavotte for piano by Rubinstein do not appear in NGII under the names used in the RCM programmes and attempts to ascertain whether they formed part of a suite have been inconclusive. The Brahms Hungarian Dances for piano were not listed specifically and, in all cases except one, it has been possible to determine neither the key of each dance nor the series (Books 1 or 2) from which they came. The Bach organ works selected for performance at the RCM concerts seem to have conformed to a narrow selection of the most well-known works. Liszt's transcriptions for piano of the six major preludes and fugues suggests these were works that were already well-known to the RCM student population and hence part of the organ repertoire; otherwise, why include them at all? Exceptions to this seem to be the remaining two preludes and fugues listed under the piano repertoire—one in C sharp minor and the other in F sharp minor. The latter was listed as being No 13 from Book 1 of the 48; while it seems likely that the C sharp prelude and fugue was also from Book 1, it is not possible to be more conclusive.

The foundation of the Associated Board throughout Britain and the Empire was a formidable force within the music profession at home and abroad. First, both RAM and RCM enjoyed an enduring monopoly on such examinations until the second half of the twentieth century. The charter of incorporation, which would undoubtedly have given conclusive insight into both its mission and purpose, has been lost and efforts to find a second copy through the Privy Council papers at the PRO at Kew have proved unsuccessful; however, details of the first set of examinations held in 1890 have survived (4.0), as has the formidable list of Local Centre examiners (4.1). The high calibre of those involved from the outset was intended to draw support for the examinations, which in turn represented little more than a crude attempt to monopolise music accreditation in Britain, while developing a financially and aesthetically lucrative portfolio across the Empire. The misjudgement of the standard of the repertoire in the Local Centre Examinations (4.3) led to the establishment of the Local School examinations (4.4) assessed by an equally distinguished set of examiners (4.2). These statistics provide an insight into the early success of the Associated Board and the formidable wielded both by the RAM and RCM. Secondly, the Associated Board allowed both the RAM and RCM successfully to petition against Hallé's application for a charter of incorporation in respect of the Royal Manchester College of Music in 1894 (5.0), in an attempt to maintain their a monopoly on British music education and a steady income.

1.1 PRINCE CONSORT'S MEMORANDUM (August, 1851)

(Disposal of the surplus from the Great Exhibition of 1851)

Source: Theodore Martin: The Life of His Royal Highness the Prince Consort (London: Smith, Elder and Co., 1876). See Appendix, Vol. 2.

It is estimated that, after defraying the expenses of the Exhibition, the Royal Commission will be left with a surplus of from £150,000 to £200,000.

The question arises: What is to be done with this surplus?

Schemes abound for its application, and a great movement is being made to get it expended upon the purchase and maintenance of the Crystal Palace as a Winter Garden.

It becomes necessary for the Royal Commission to mature some plan for itself on a careful and conscientious consideration of its position, powers and duties, in order not to find itself at the end of its important labours driven into execution of ill-digested projects by the force of accident or popular agitation.

In order to arrive at a sound opinion on what is to be done, we must ask ourselves: What are the objects the Exhibition had in view, how far these objects have been realised, and how far they can be further promoted?

I take the objects to have been: the promotion of every branch of human industry by means of the comparison of their processes and results as carried on and obtained by all the nations of the earth, and the promotion of kindly feelings of the nations towards each other by the practical illustration of the advantages which may be derived by each from the labours and achievements of the others.

Only in a close adherence to this governing idea, and in a consistent carrying out of what has been hitherto done, can we find a safe guide for future plans.

But even if this were not the case, it will be found that by former announcements to the public, we have distinctly pledged ourselves to expend any surplus which may accrue towards the establishment of future Exhibitions or objects strictly in connection with the present Exhibition.

The purchase of the Crystal Palace for the purpose of establishing a Winter Garden, or a Museum of Antiquities, or a public promenade, ride, lounging place &c, &c, has, in my opinion, no connection whatever with the objects of the Exhibition. Our connection with the building has been an incidental one, namely, as a covering to our collection, and ceases with the dispersion of that collection; and, therefore, even if we were not bound by legal contracts to remove the building on a specified day, and the dictates of good faith did not induce us strictly to fulfil our moral engagements towards the public, even although released from our legal engagements, I consider that we have not the power to divert any part of the surplus towards providing the London, or even the British, public with a place of recreation.

But, should the public wish to maintain the building, we ought not to stand in the way of the Government keeping it up to the 1st of May, should they feel it their duty to take such a course.

If I am asked, what I would do with the surplus, I would propose the following scheme:-

I am assured, that from twenty-five to thirty acres of ground nearly opposite the Crystal Palace, on the other side of the Kensington Road, called Kensington Gore (including Soyer's Symposium), are to be purchased at this moment for about 50,000l. I would buy that ground, and place on it four Institutions, corresponding to the four great sections of the Exhibition – Raw Materials, Machinery, Manufactures, and Plastic Art.

I would devote these Institutions to the furtherance of the industrial pursuits of all nations in these four divisions.

If I examine what are the means by which improvement and progress can be obtained in any branch of human knowledge, I find them to consist of four: (1) Personal study from books. (2) Oral communication of knowledge by those who possess it to those who wish to acquire it. (3) Acquisition of knowledge by ocular observation, comparison, and demonstration. (4) Exchange of ideas by personal discussion.

Hence I would provide each of these Institutions with the means of forming (1) a library and rooms for study; (2) lecture rooms; (3) an acre of glass covering for the purposes of exhibition; and (4) rooms for conversazioni, discussions, and commercial meetings. The surplus space might be laid out as gardens for public enjoyment, and so as to admit of the future erection of public monuments there, according to a well-arranged plan. The centre might be applicable for the public conservatory, if wished for.

The Institution for the Raw Material, would be most usefully subdivided into Metallurgy, Metallurgical Chemistry, and Animal and Vegetable Physiology (Agricultural Chemistry? Microscopy).

That of Machinery would embrace the whole branch of Polytechnic Science with its subdivisions.

That of Manufactures would comprise a School of Design and Chemistry, as applied to Manufactures.

The fourth (the Plastic Art), Architecture, Antiquities, Sculpture.

Now I find, that for all these separate pursuits, we have a variety of public Societies in England struggling for existence, unconnected with each other, unprovided with any suitable locations; the Geological Society, Botanical Society, Linnaean Society, Zoological Society, Microscopical Society, Agricultural Society, &c &c, Polytechnic society, Society of Civil Engineers, the Society of Arts, Manufacture, and Commerce (from which the Exhibition has sprung, and which, after having produced its flower, will have exhausted its vital power, and cannot return to what it was before), the Society of Architects, of Antiquaries, Archaeological, &c.

Could not these Societies, or most of them, containing as they do all that this country possesses of talent and experience in these branches, be united in these Institutions, reserving to each its individuality, and its self-supporting and self-managing character, but bringing them under a general system, and so far asking them to reform their Charters as to make them more popular Institutions – I mean thereby Institutions placed in a relation of reciprocal influence with public opinion?

If these Societies were to sell their present habitations and property, and thereby were freed from the heaviest part of their expenses, they would be enabled materially to assist the first establishment of their new existence.

In order to secure a certain uniformity of system amongst them, they might, in all matters of interest common to them, be governed by a Central Committee of their Chairmen. To this central body might be added the Statistical Society, in order to obtain for the civilised world an accurate collection of the materials, from which alone those general laws can be abstracted, guided by which we can hope safely to advance in all branches of civilisation.

These Institutions must be open and common to all nations, and would soon spread their ramifications into all countries. As the surplus with which they are to be founded has been obtained from the public, attracted and gratified by the sight of the works which the Exhibitors have at great expense, trouble, and risk to themselves sent to the Crystal Palace, it would be but a proper return, and, I am afraid, the only one we could offer, to receive them as the first Life Members of the Institution.

By a scheme like this we should ensure that the Great Exhibition of 1851 should not become a transitory event of mere temporary interest, but that its objects would be perpetuated, that the different industrial pursuits of mankind, arts, and science, should not again relapse into a state of comparative isolation from each other, in which their progress is necessarily retarded, and that the different nations would remain in that immediate relation of mutual assistance, by which these pursuits are incalculably advanced, and their goodwill towards each other permanently fortified.

I may mention as a circumstance which may give additional importance to the consideration of such a scheme, that the locality I have mentioned is one which has been recommended also as an eligible site for a new National Gallery, and that the purchase of the whole, and the re-sale to the Government of as might be required for this purpose, might cause a considerable saving to the Exchequer, and, instead of absorbing it, might furnish additional open space to the metropolis, whilst it could assist the study of art in connection with manufacture.

I am perfectly aware that this is but a very crude scheme, requiring mature consideration and practical tests in its details; but I thought it my duty towards the Commission to lay it before them at as early a moment as possible, in order that the remaining weeks of the Exhibition might be employed in investigating it, or that we might be led by that investigation to the discovery of a more feasible plan.

2.1 NTSM CONSTITUTION (1878)

(Proposed by the Royal Commission for the Exhibition of 1851)

The National Training School of Music is formed for the purpose of promoting the cultivation of musical science. The primary object of the School is to give free instruction to a certain number of persons who may have acquired scholarships by competitive examination. The School, however, will also undertake to instruct persons who may be desirous of a musical education on payment.

The buildings in which the School is held have been erected by the munificence of Mr Freake on land belonging to the Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1851. The subscriptions to the School have been promised for five years only, commencing with the year 1876. The Commissioners are anxious that the School should ultimately be placed on a permanent footing, and undertake, in the event of its being proved to their satisfaction that the School is able to maintain itself at the expiration of the above-mentioned period of five years, to make such an appropriation of the ground on which the School stands and of the buildings of the School as will place the School on a permanent footing; but in the event of its being proved to the satisfaction of the Commissioners at the expiration of the period of five years that the School cannot be successfully prosecuted, the Commissioners will then be prepared to deal with the buildings of the School as they think most conducive to the interests of their trust.

The Commissioners recognise the munificence of Mr Freake in erecting the School, and, in appropriating the buildings, will have regard to any representations that may be made by him or on his behalf.

COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT

The management of the School will be vested in a Committee consisting of the several persons named in the schedule hereto. The Committee may, with the consent of the Commissioners, add to their number and fill up any vacancies in their number. In adding to their number, or filling up any vacancy in their number, the Committee will take care to have a proper representation of any persons who may become donors of scholarships or persons who may give pecuniary assistance to the School. The Committee would also give fair representation to the Society of Arts which did so much to found the School' and they would also keep themselves in friendly representation with the Council of the Royal Albert Hall.

The Committee will remain in office until the [blank] day of [blank]

The Committee, during their continuance in office, shall have absolute power to manage the School in such manner as they think best calculated to promote the objects for which the School is formed.

They may amalgamate or affiliate the School with or to the Royal Academy of Music, or enter into any arrangements they may think fit with that Academy.

They may admit paying pupils to the School on such terms as they think expedient, and they may from time to time alter the rules with respect to the scholarships.

They may appoint and dismiss professors, officers, and servants, solicit subscriptions, invest the proceeds thereof, and generally act with respect to the School as they think expedient.

On or before the [blank] day of [blank] the Committee shall make a report to the Commissioners stating whether the School can in their opinion be successfully carried on or not. If the report be in the affirmative, they will present a scheme of constitution to the Commissioners, and the Commissioners will deal with such scheme according to the principles which they have above indicated as guiding them in their relations towards the School.

PROCEEDINGS OF COMMITTEE

Any member of the Committee may resign by notifying his intention so to do in writing to the chairman of the Committee for the time being.

The Committee shall meet for the despatch of business, and shall from time to time make such regulations with respect to the summoning, notice, place, management, and adjournment of such meetings, and generally with respect to the transaction and management of business, including the quorum at meetings of the Committee, as they think fit, subject to the following conditions:

- (a) The first meeting shall be held on the [blank] day of [blank]; [blank]
- (b) An extraordinary meeting may be summoned at any time on the requisition of three members of the Committee addressed to the clerk of the Committee;
- (c) The quorum to be fixed by the Committee shall consist of not less than three members;
- (d) Every question shall be decided by a majority of votes of the members present and voting on that question;
- (e) The names of the members present at a meeting and upon a requisition made by three or more members voting on a question the names of the members voting on that question, shall be recorded.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh shall be chairman of the Committee

The Committee shall at the first meeting, and afterwards from time to time at their first annual meeting, appoint one of their members to be a vice-chairman for the year following such choice.

If any casual vacancy occurs in the office of chairman or vice-chairman, the Committee shall, as soon as they conveniently can after the occurrence of such vacancy, choose some member of their number to fill such vacancy.

If at any meeting the chairman is not present at the time appointed for holding the same, the vice-chairman shall be the chairman of the meeting; and if neither the chairman nor vice-chairman be present, then members present shall choose some one of their number to be a chairman of such meeting.

In case of an equality of votes at any meeting, the chairman for the time being of such meeting shall have a second or casting vote.

RULES AS TO SCHOLARSHIPS

Scholarships

The school is intended to provide for the instruction of about 300 students, and it is purposed to establish about 300 scholarships of the annual value of £40 each. The scholarships can be held only by persons who shall have been successful in competitive examinations. Each scholarship entitles the holder to free instruction in the School without payment of fees of any kind.

Competition for Admission to the School, etc.

Candidates for scholarships will be required to pass a competitive examination for which they must be nominated by the founders of the scholarships.

The founders of scholarships, whether individuals, corporations, schools, or bodies of subscribers, will, in every case, determine –

Documents Required from all Candidates

Before competing, the candidate must produce to the local authorities, or to others conducting the competition, the following certificates:

- b) the copy of a register of birth
- c) The certificate of two well-known persons in a locality that he, or she, is of good moral character

Sources of Information for Competitors

Intending competitors should apply for information to the local secretaries of the districts which have established scholarships. They may also apply to the Registrar of the School, who will give them the names and addresses of the secretaries of the Local Committees that may be about to hold competitions for Scholarships.

Note: This will require alteration by persons conversant with the matter

Victoria, by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland Queen, Defender of the Faith, to all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

Whereas it has been presented to us by our most dearly beloved son, Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, that it is expedient to promote the further advancement of the art of music in the United Kingdom by the establishment of a Royal Musical Corporation of Music on a more permanent and extended basis than any existing institution:

Now know ye that we, being desirous of promoting the advancement of the art of music in the United Kingdom by the establishment of the said Corporation, have our especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion given and granted, and we do hereby give and grant, that our said beloved son Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, and all other persons who are or may become members of the Corporation established by this our charter in pursuance of the provisions thereof, shall be the body corporate by the name of the royal, having a perpetual succession and a common seal, with a power to sue and to be sued in their corporate name, and to acquire and hold lands for the purpose of the said corporation without license in mortmain; and we do hereby declare as follows:

PURPOSE OF THE CORPORATION

The purpose for which the Corporation is founded is the advancement of the art of music, by the creation of a central representative body charged with the duty of providing musical instruction of the highest class, and having a capacity to exercise a powerful influence on the cultivation, practice, and regulation of the art and science of music, and to promote musical instruction.

AS TO THE PRESIDENT

The first President shall be His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. On the resignation or death of the President, the vacancy shall be filled up by the nomination of a successor under the sign manual of the Sovereign for the time being.

The vice-presidents shall be appointed by the President, and their number after the first appointments shall not exceed fifteen.

Any vacancy in the office of vice-president may be filled up by the President for the time being, but it shall not be incumbent on the president to fill up any such vacancy so long as the number of vice-presidents holding office shall be not less than three.

The senior vice-presidents shall perform such other duties as may with their assent be imposed on them by the Council.

AS TO THE COUNCIL

The Council shall consist of the President, the Principal and Vice-Principal, for the time being of the Corporation, and of thirty ordinary members.

Any casual vacancy occurring in either division of the Council may be filled up by the Council, but any person chosen to fill such vacancy shall not retain his office as a member if he absent himself from all meetings of the Council for not less than four months, unless the council resolve that it is expedient that such member should not vacate his office.

3.1 RCM DRAFT CHARTER (1880)

Victoria, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, to all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

Whereas by petition presented to us by our most dearly beloved son his Royal Highness Albert Edward Prince of Wales, Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, it is amongst other things shown that it is expedient that a royal college of music should be formed on a more permanent basis than any existing institution, with the inclusion as part thereof of the National Training School at South Kensington.

 - (d) Colonial Bonds or Stock
 - (e) Railway Debenture or Preference Stock
 - (f) Debentures or Stock of 'Local Authorities' or Corporations.
 - (g) On deposit at interest in Colonial or other Banks of undoubted standing.
- 5 There shall be laid before the Finance Committee, at the beginning of each term, a statement, prepared under the authority of the Director, showing the estimated expenditure for that Term in advance, required for the ordinary operations of the College, including:
 - (a) Salaries;
 - (b) Payments to Professors, and for the Board and maintenance of Pupils;
 - (c) Indispensable miscellaneous outlay for such items as gas, water, rates, repairs, and household expenses, printing, stationery etc.

6 On such estimate being approved by two Members of the Finance Committee at least, they may direct a [~~'a' crossed out by Grove~~] cheque [~~'s' added by Grove~~] to issue [~~'from time to time' added by Grove~~] for the amount payable [~~'what the director is authorised to spend' added by Grove~~] to the order of the Director and Honorary Secretary.

7 The Director shall open a subsidiary account at the [~~'at such Bank as the Finance Committee may from time to time determine.'~~ Added by Grove instead of '~~the~~'] Kensington Branch of the London and Westminster Bank, to be called 'Director's account,' to the credit of which [~~'the amounts authorised' crossed out~~ and replaced with '~~such amounts as the Director is authorised to spend~~'] under paragraphs 5 and 6 shall be placed, and cheques against such subsidiary account, signed by the Director and countersigned by some officer to be designated from time to time by the Finance Committee, shall be available, but shall be drawn by him only for the purposes and against the services authorised in the estimate.

8 In presenting the requisitions in advance, the Director shall at the same time produce an account with proper voucher for all payments made during the previous quarter, and showing the balance, if any, in his hands. Such accounts and vouchers shall be in a form proper to be submitted to the auditors.

9 The Director shall prepare such a system for the management of the accounts of the Household, and showing the payments to the various Boarding Houses of the Pupils, as will exhibit clearly the items of expenditure under appropriate headings.

10 It is desirable that as far as practicable all payments should be made by cheque, and further that such cheques should be payable to the order of the person entitled to receive the money.

11 The accounts of the College shall be made up to and balanced on the 30th day of April of each year; shall distinguish clearly between items of capital and revenue; and these accounts, as well as those of the Director to the like date, shall, with the proper vouchers, be ready for the examination of the auditor within 20 days from such balancing day.

12 The [~~'Finance Committee recommend to His Royal Highness and the Council the appointment of two competent Auditors, and suggest the names of' crossed out by Grove~~] Charles Lister Ryan, Esq., C.B., Assistant Comptroller and Auditor General, and Tressyllian P. Shipp, Esq., Secretary to the London and Westminster Bank, Lothbury, London, [~~'as auditors of the College to hold office during the pleasure of the Council' added by Grove~~].

13 When the Finance Committee recognise the propriety of excluding from Capital or Permanent Investment Account annual subscriptions and other moneys intended for the current maintenance of the College, they are of opinion that no scholarship should depend on any such temporary sources of revenue, and should not be founded until a sufficient capital is promised and invested to yield a permanent revenue equal to that which may from time to time be fixed as the proper annual provision to be made for scholarships.

20th July 1883

[The following added in Grove's handwriting: 'Scholarships founded from time to time or that become vacant shall be filled by [~~'public' crossed through~~] competition at the commencement of the financial year of the College only.]

5.0 RAM & RCM PETITION OPPOSING RMCM CHARTER (1893)

Source: Privy Council Records, PRO Kew.

TO THE COMMITTEE OF HER MAJESTY'S
MOST HONOURABLE PRIVY COUNCIL
APPOINTED TO CONSIDER THE APPLICATION OF
THE ROYAL MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC
FOR A ROYAL CHARTER

We, the undersigned, being duly appointed representatives of the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music, to act on behalf of those Corporations in the matter hereinafter referred to, do humbly petition as follows:-

1. The Royal Academy of Music was instituted in the year 1822 and incorporated by Royal Charter in the year 1830, 'to promote the cultivation of the Science of Music and to afford facilities for attaining perfection in it by assisting with general instruction all persons desirous of acquiring a knowledge thereof.' Acting under the powers conferred by the Charter, the Governing Body of the Royal Academy of Music has framed Bye-laws and Regulations for carrying out the above objects by giving tuition at the Academy and by examining and granting diplomas to persons who have studied Music elsewhere.

2. The Royal College of Music was incorporated by Royal Charter in 1883, and its objects are thus set forth in the Charter:-

'The purposes for which the Corporation is founded are – first, the advancement of the Art of Music by means of a central teaching and examining body charged with the duty of providing musical instruction of the highest class, and of rewarding with academical degrees and certificates of proficiency and otherwise persons, whether educated or not at the College, who on examination may prove themselves worthy of such distinctions and evidences of attainment; and, secondly, the promotion and supervision of such musical instruction in schools and elsewhere as may be thought most conducive to the cultivation and dissemination of the Art of Music in the United Kingdom; and, lastly, generally the encouragement and promotion of the cultivation of Music as an art throughout Our dominions.'

3. Your Petitioners are in no way opposed to the establishment, on a sound and permanent basis, of a musical institution for teaching purposes, either at Manchester or any other important town in the kingdom. But they submit that the power 'to hold musical examinations, and to grant diplomas, certificates, and marks of distinction to persons deserving of the same, whether educated at the College or elsewhere,' which is sought under the proposed Charter, is beyond the scope and object of such an institution.

4. Your Petitioners, respectfully urge the following grounds of objection to the granting of a Royal Charter to the Royal Manchester College of Music:-

- A. It is, they submit, unwise to grant a Royal Charter to any college of music before it has been in existence long enough to establish both the fact of the soundness of its teaching and the permanence of its financial security.
- B. Compliance with the petition of the Royal Manchester College of Music would in all probability lead to similar petition from other important provincial towns; and the granting of such applications would diminish the value of Royal Charters and lessen the authority of those institutions which at present possess them.
- C. In addition to providing a complete course of musical instruction for their own Students, both the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music have for years past held examinations of persons who have received their musical education elsewhere than at those institutions, and who are already in, or desire to enter, the ranks of the profession as qualified teachers or performers. The diplomas respectively of licentiateship and Associateship granted to successful candidates at these examinations are regarded as amongst the highest distinctions obtainable by music teachers and performers. The importance of increasing the value of genuine distinctions by limiting their number is universally acknowledged, and has been the subject of much comment in the Press and elsewhere.

- D. The powers sought by the Royal Manchester College of Music under Clause XIII of its proposed Charter are identical in terms with those which have already been conferred upon the Royal College of Music by its Charter, as follows:-

‘The Council may enter into any engagements with the Government respecting musical instruction in elementary or other Government Schools, including the inspection of Schools, the conduct of examinations, the providing wholly or partially for the supply or education of musical teachers, the appropriation of scholarships or otherwise to persons educated in such Schools, and any other matter in relation to the promotion of Music in connection with Government aid which may be thought expedient.’

- E. In order the more thoroughly to carry out the duties entrusted to them by their respective Charters, and with a view to the general raising of the standard of musical education throughout the United Kingdom, the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music in the year 1889 combined to form a joint body known as the ‘Associated Board of the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music,’ under the Presidency of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. This Board has established a system of Local Centre and Local School Examinations for the whole of the United Kingdom. The number of Local Centres at present established has reached 107, and more than 400 Schools are on the Register. It may therefore confidently be submitted that neither at Manchester nor in any other town is there a necessity for a local school of music to examine other than its own students; since an examination which commands the confidence of the musical profession generally is brought by the ‘Associated Board’ within reach of every musical student in the Kingdom.
- F. One of the chief difficulties which the existing chartered institutions have to encounter in their efforts to improve the general musical education of the country is the increasing number of examinations for musical diplomas, certificates, and marks of distinction offered by irresponsible bodies. The results of such multiplication of examinations are: (1) a want of uniformity in the standard of excellence required; (2) the temptation to make the granting of certificates, &c., a matter of private speculation; (3) the endeavour to secure large numbers of candidates by making a ‘pass’ so easy as to be no real test of merit, whereby the public are deceived, and the standard of musical education and the status of the profession itself are lowered.
5. Your Petitioners submit herewith copies of their charters referred to, and other documents relating to the Royal Academy of Music, the Royal College of Music, and the ‘Associated Board.’
6. Your Petitioners respectfully urge that for the reasons set forth herein the Petition of the Royal Manchester College of Music be not granted, and they pray that should any further consideration be given thereto they may be permitted to be heard by Counsel.
